Phoenix Percussion Saves the Day

Phoenix Percussion came to the aid of one of our tenor drummers who sustained an upper arm injury on the day before the World Pipe Band Championships in Glasgow. Lauren Baines suffered a severe strain to her upper arm and was on the brink of missing the Championship completely, not being able to lift her arm above shoulder height. After a sleepless night and much pain, Chris Wallace and the folks from Phoenix came through in a big way for Lauren. They met Lauren and the band on the Green and fitted her with their latest product, the "Talon" Tenor Drum Carrier. Designed to distribute the weight of the drum to several points compared to the traditional over one shoulder style rig, the carrier performed remarkably well and allowed Lauren enough relief to play in both rounds of the Championship and be part of the SL78th World Champion Bass Section.

Many thanks to Chris and Phoenix Percussion for stepping up and lending a hand! Check them out at www.phoenixpercussionltd.com
